Are you a start-up founder or company head looking for legal advice or representation?

Obtaining in-house legal representation is truly a costly affair, and the general exorbitant fees associated with those services discourage many small business owners and start-up founders.

However, all companies and start-ups have certain legal needs that they need to fulfil to ensure the smooth running of their business. In order to be successful, these legal needs cannot be ignored, and appropriate legal guidance is necessary to address them.

Key Services

There are a variety of legal needs that may arise.

Here is why it is necessary to have a lawyer by your side if you are a part of a start-up or company.

- Identifying Risks

A lawyer needs to foresee any issues that may arise by analysing the business and managing, and addressing risks. To do so, lawyers need to be alert from the very beginning and they should identify key agreements and advise on the same.

- Licensing

For any business, registration, authorisation and licensing are very important. The lawyer will identify which licence is needed and assist with obtaining the licence and approval.

- Protecting intellectual property

The lawyer will guide you through the process of registering intellectual property, and inform when Non-Disclosure Agreements need to be executed. These legal procedures are important to ensure growth and stability for any business.

- Drafting And Reviewing Contracts

Contracts are central in the day-to-day functioning of a start-up or company, including investment contracts, shareholder agreements and founders' agreements.

In such cases, you need an experienced lawyer who can help you with drafting and reviewing these agreements. Contracts help businesses prevent unnecessary losses so it is important that contracts are made diligently.

JB Solicitors Membership

At JB Solicitors, we have devised a special membership plan, giving due consideration to your financial burden.

This plan includes various services that are of importance under commercial law. These include: -

- Making sure your business complies with prevalent laws and regulations;
- Incorporating your company and gaining advice on business structure models and creation of trusts;
- Registering Intellectual Property (IP) that could be registered as patents, trademarks, or copyright;
- Protecting your personal assets;
- Assisting with sales, raising capital, and business purchases;
- Drafting documents and making amendments;
- Negotiating complicated contracts;
- Drafting and reviewing contracts like shareholder agreements, and employee contracts;
- General HR compliance advice by expert employment lawyers; and
- All other legal advice consultations.

*Separate costs are attached with litigation services and they are not included in the membership plan

In-house Lawyer versus JB Solicitors Membership

Generally, in-house lawyers are involved in all decision-making matters of a company. They undertake a variety of roles, including:

- Assisting with high value transactions;
- Advising boards on risk and strategy;
- Diagnosing everyday issues, and resolving everyday issues;
- Helping with mergers and acquisitions; and
- Helping with insolvency.

At JB Solicitors, our lawyers provide the same services at more cost-effective prices. In-house legal counsel will typically cost a company or start-up at least $100K per year. On the other hand, when companies approach private practitioners for various legal issues throughout the year, the costs add up to around $25K per year.

Taking into consideration these rates, and your legal needs, we've come up with an all-inclusive membership plan with affordable rates for all companies and start-ups.
